CONGRESSIONAL HAPPENINGS IN WASHINGTON

By CLARENCE J. BROWN
Member of Congress,
Seventh Ohio District

The chief topic of conversation during the past week has been, of course, Germany's seizure of Denmark and invasion of Norway, and the air and naval battles that have resulted therefrom. Most Washington observers believe that the move against the Scandinavian countries marks the opening of a general war of major proportions. Some predict that Germany will soon invade Holland and Belgium. Others think that the next operations will be in the Balkans, with England endeavoring to shut off Germany's supplies of oil and wheat. On Capitol Hill the universal feeling is one of sympathy for the Scandinavian countries; but underneath is a strong determination that the United States shall not and must not become involved in the European conflict.

Military and naval chiefs are watching closely the results of the battles that have been going on in Scandinavian waters, in which ships and planes have both been engaged. There has long been an argument as to whether or not the battleship or the airplane would prove most effective in actual warfare. If the battleships win over the airplanes then England and France will in all probability win the war. However, if the aircraft can destroy the battleships, then England's sea power is broken and Germany will be in a much better position than ever before. If the battleships win, the United States will speed up a huge naval building program now under way, and undoubtedly greater appropriations will be made for naval construction. However, if the airplanes prove to be the masters of the battleships then America's ship building program will be sharply curtailed and every attention will be paid to building up a giant air force for defense purposes.

After two weeks of marking time and considering only minor legislation, the House is getting down to serious work. By the time this appears in print the Logan-Walter bill, giving the right of appeal to the courts from rulings and decisions of bureau and commissions, will be under consideration in the House of Representatives. Next will come consideration of amendments to the Wages and Hours law. Soon thereafter relief appropriations, amendments to the National Labor Relations Act, and other controversial legislation will be on the congressional agenda. As a result, congressional leaders originally predicting adjournment for May 15th are now saying they believe Congress will adjourn by June 15th. Some legislative veterans are of the opinion however, that if the full fury of war breaks in Europe Congress may remain in session most of the summer.

With a European war going on, with America flooded with propaganda from alien sources, and with the Dies committee revelations fresh in their minds, congressional leaders are hard put to understand President Roosevelt's veto last week of the bill by Congressman Joe Starnes of Alabama, which provided for the prosecution and deportation of Aliens engaged in anti-American activities, subversive propaganda, violation of the narcotic laws and other criminal acts. Congressman Starnes is a member of the Dies Committee and his bill was introduced as a result of evidence uncovered by the Committee.

The Cherry Blossoms are out at last—more than a week late. Many visitors, including five hundred and fifty from Central Ohio, who came on a newspaper sponsored tour, found Washington an interesting place, but saw no Cherry Blossoms. However, other thousands visiting Washington in the last few days have been enjoying the unusual sight of the tidal basin fringed with blossoms.

An Ohio farm boy more than an hour held several hundred listeners spell bound at the National Press Club luncheon last week. Made up of the nation's best news writers high governmental and diplomatic officials, and business leaders of the nation, a Press Club audience is perhaps the most intelligent and hardest to please than can be found anywhere in America. Yet the speaker from Ohio had the attention of all. He was Charles F. Kettering, vice-president of the General Motors Corporation in charge of research—the Ohio farm boy who invented the self starter for automobiles the fever machine for the relief of human suffering and many other great inventions. Most of his great work has been done in and near Dayton. For some time he has been con-

Provisions will be made for 80 pens. The barn will have a frontage of 100 feet and an ultimate depth of 120 feet when proposed extensions are added.

John M. Grierson Candidate For Senator

John M. Grierson, Hillsboro, Highland county, was in town Monday in the interest of his campaign for state senator in the Fifth-Sixth District, seeking the Republican nomination.

Mr. Grierson is a leading farmer in his county and has endorsements from leading farm organizations as well as prominent Republicans. He bids for farm support on the plea that the Fifth-Sixth District is strictly agricultural and that he will have no other interest than what will be required for rural and townspeople. He is openly against any proposal for changing the status of the rural counties either by legislation or constitutional change.

Prof. Clarence Clausen Says His People Must Not Resist Germany

The Springfield Sun, Monday, carried a story by Prof. Clarence Clausen, professor in history at Wittenberg College, a native of Norway, who says his people should cease their resistance with Germany. Clausen was bitter in his criticisms of British tactics in Scandinavia and asserted it was "inconceivable for England not to have her fleet stationed in such a way as to block Nazi troopships from landing as many soldiers as they did." He predicted his country could not win by herself in land warfare, and that Sweden would remain neutral but under Germany's thumb.

The warner to the European situation is that England will continue the war as long as she can keep it on another's soil.

TAX SURVEY BEING MADE BY AUDITOR

County Auditor James J. Curlett is making a complete tax survey of Antioch College property in Yellow Springs as to what is taxable and what is not. Mr. Curlett is doing the work in his office as a matter of economy. The survey is made due to a controversy brought about by village officials and Antioch College.

A new listing will be made of all Antioch-owned real estate according to Curlett, who said college officials are giving him every assistance and cooperation in his undertaking. Questionnaires then will be submitted to the college to be filled out with descriptions of each parcel of property and the use to which it is put. In a number of "borderline" cases, where the tax exemption status is in doubt, Curlett plans to have the state board of tax appeals pass upon the matter, making no recommendations with respect to his own findings.

Antioch officials believe the tax exemption of not more than 10 per cent of college property at most is involved in the present survey.

Records show that Antioch owns $555,270 worth of tax free property in Yellow Springs and Miami township covering 174 different parcels of real estate. The college pays taxes on property valued at $26,240, including village holdings worth $10,010 and township property currently appraised at $16,230. The total tax duplicate of Yellow Springs, seat of the college, is only $890,350, and the village tax rate of $19.30 per $1000 valuation for 1939 is the highest in the county.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

San Marcos, Texas, April 11, 1940

The Cedarville Herald, Cedarville, Ohio. Dear Mr. Editor: Some friend or reader of yours handed me his April 5th copy of your paper, seldom indulged in discussions from the North or South standpoint, and not much given to prejudice, and do not encourage it in others. But there are some questions of principle that are not sectional and I have in mind the precedent of 150 years from our Presidents serving more than two terms.

Below is an article of mine which was published in the Austin American of Austin, Texas, in their issue of April 1st. If you share this view and should care to do so you have my permission to publish the article in your paper over my name. "Let us give the modern version, the 1940 version. The third term idea is the forbidden island. The treacherous reef is the precedent of 150 years which is intended to wreck the ambition of anyone who would violate it. Another thing: Any president who has served two terms should be wise and determined enough to ask that he be tied to the mast rather than suffer the people to forsake their own best interest for the illusion of a temporary one. If any president confesses that eight years is not long enough to learn the sacredness of being trusted by the people of this nation. The towering wisdom of the two term precedent should not be thoughtlessly discarded. Surely the people of this nation may be trusted not to do so." Clay Armstrong, P. O. Box 467, San Marcos, Texas

Southern Paper Is Against Third Term

The Galvin papers including the Greene County Journal last week carried a double column editorial from the Ft. Lauderdale, Florida, News-Dem., demanding that Franklin D. Roosevelt renounce all claims to a third term. This demand coming from the owner of the paper who is a recognized Democrat indicates sentiment in the south is against a third term for any president.

Touring North Thru Historic States

Jamestown, Va., the first English settlement in America came into being in May, 1607 when settlers took over the small island and set up the first form of government ever known on the continent. The site is now marked by a suitable monument erected by the government and the island converted into a public park. In the enclosure is a museum with many relics of the early days. Only the walls of an old brick residence stand, this being the third building erected on the site and each having been destroyed by fire and rebuilt until the last fire which left the standing walls to weather sunshine and storm probably for ages to come.

Jamestown was the seat of the government until about 1632 when it was moved to Middle Plantation later to become Williamsburg, Va., six miles distant from the site of the first settlers. One of the first buildings at the new site was the Wren community building erected in 1655, and the state capitol in 1705; and later a church beside such residences as best could be erected in those days. A court house was a necessity for transaction of public business and such was erected and its walls stand today.

In 1680 was erected a house of worship, the old foundation of which was discovered a few years ago on the site of the present building which was erected about 1706 and services have been held there weekly ever since. This parish was called Bruton, being named after Bruton, County, Somerset, England. This was the home of the governor, Sir William Berkeley and the Lutwell family.

The second building was of brick and erected about 1715 and has served its purposes until this day. About 1752 the building was found to be inadequate to accommodate the congregation and was lengthened to 100 feet with a breadth of 28 feet and two wings on each side 22 feet in width. An organ was installed in 1755 with Peter Pelham organist. A brick wall was erected around the churchyard and completed in 1754 which also enclosed the graveyard.

Church history says a new steeple was erected in 1769 and in it hung the "Liberty Bell" of Virginia given to the parish in 1761 by James Tardiff, a gallery in the rear was added to care for the students of the College of William and Mary and church records show that the door to the gallery was locked at the beginning of the four hour service so the students could not leave until church services were ended.

No church edifice in the country has as complete a record of its existence as Bruton Parish Church. The building was improved in 1840 and again in 1905. One of the treasured books is a Pre-Revolutionary Prayer Book stamped on the binding "Bruton Parish 1752", in which the prayer for the President of the United States is pasted over the prayer for King George; the Pre-Revolutionary Bible, 1753; the old Parish Register of baptisms and deaths back to 1692; and the Baptismal Font which was brought from Jamestown to Williamsburg in 1699, also the communion service. There is a Bible presented to the church by King Edward VII in 1907 and a prayer desk Bible given by President Woodrow Wilson. President Theodore Roosevelt presented the parish a bronze tablet to commemorate the 300th anniversary of the establishment of the first church. In the church and churchyard are buried two colonial governors, a justice of the Supreme Court, and many prominent in the church-state and nation.

The church has been restored inside and out and was redecorated Sunday, April 7th. It was interesting to find the names of George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, James Madison, John Adams, and other notable of that day on the pews they occupied. The pews are carpeted and each seat cushioned but the backs are as straight as they were 300 years ago. The restoration was made possible by public subscription and the Rockefeller funds.

It cost 1000 pounds of tobacco to be buried under the chance of the church and lesser amounts to be within other parts of the church, the floor being of marble. The cost of burial out in the churchyard at extreme distance from the building was four pounds of tobacco. There are a number of prominent men buried in the church.

Colonial Williamsburg is being restored to its native state by the generosity of Mr. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and is costing several million dollars. It will be the mecca for all the various patriotic organizations in the country. Up to the time the writer visited the city 69 buildings have been restored as they were in colonial days; 149 buildings have been rebuilt entirely; 38 shops and stores in keeping with the architectural ideas of the early days have been erected and are now occupied; 548 so-called modern buildings have been erected.

Pickering, Ross Twp., newly-elected superintendent of the county schools to succeed Prof. Aultman, were honored guests last Thursday evening at a banquet in the First U. P. Church, Xenia. WHAT WEALTH DID FOR POSTERITY

In the news columns a few days ago appeared the name of the founder of a string of moderate priced hotels supposedly for the use of laboring men in the cities. When Danny Driscoll registered for a fifty-cent room in a New York Mills Hotel, he was the fiftieth million guest to so register since the founding of these institutions.

It was a happy occasion for Driscoll even though he had but $1.50 left after being assigned a room. He was escorted to a room where he was greeted by Mayor LaGuardia and others, including the grandson of the founder, Ogden Mills Reid, president of the Herald-Tribune, and son of the late Whitelaw Reid, known to all in this community directly or by historical connection. The elder Mills established a trust of several millions to support these hotels and Ogden Reid is one of the trustees.

Driscoll was treated to a buffet supper and much speech-making, honored as he had never been before and yet he regaled with his mother some 200 miles distant from the big city. He had gone to New York in search of a position as a singer but could not connect. Rather than face charity he secured a position as snow shoveler and earned $55. He sent $25 to his mother and used the balance to keep body and soul together until fortune came his way but the future was dark until he laid fifty cents on the hotel counter and became famous over night.

There are of course many such as Driscoll that we never hear of but there evidently are more that are not without giving up. Had Darius O. Mills given up hope even once in his early days he would never have accumulated the fortune that went into this trust fund for the benefit of mankind in the years that were to follow. Under our present social set-up who is there that will have the vision of Darius O. Mills to equal his gift for the generations that are to follow? No state or nation can provide permanently for the able bodied of all classes even during panics or depressions. This must be left to personal effort of such as Mill, Carnegie and Rockefeller. If Carnegie had been branded a malefactor of wealth and a royal economist how many cities and towns would today have a public library?

THE AMERICAN GOLD SWINDLE

The New Deal purchased gold to the amount of $459,844,000 during the month of March, the fourth largest purchase in any one month on record for any nation. We tax our people to get government funds and then we purchase gold and bury it in the ground down in Kentucky. Most of this gold is purchased from Mexico, Canada, Russia and the British Empire. These countries all want to sell in our market for the reason the government is paying much more than the world market price. It was argued here by Democratic leaders that by paying a higher than market price for gold we would raise the price all over the world. England controls the world price. She is not purchasing gold but her gold producing countries are selling here at a big profit. Russia gets about $30 profit for each ounce sold here. Canadian gold mines are working day and night to mine gold for our market and we give them a handsome profit.

England always does business in financial affairs through the Bank of England. Few people know it but the pound sterling has two values, known as the free rate and the official rate. England takes the profit through the bank by purchasing on the low rate and selling on the high rate. England sells gold at a high price to us and purchases her war planes on the free rate of exchange. Moreover England is credited with purchasing her army planes from American manufacturers at $3,000 less than what the present administration is paying. Thus King George has made the U. S. her financial agent and also her arsenal, even though she has not been able to get the sons of American mothers in her army to carry on her war in Europe.

Meantime the government engraving bureau is working seven days and seven nights, week in and week out, turning out U. S. bonds to pay our neighbors a handsome price for their gold.

KEEP THE DOLLARS ROLLING

By this time, the old rumor that a banker's greatest pleasure in life is to refuse a loan, should have been thoroughly exploded.

Perhaps never before were banks so eager to make sound loans, and to put the money for which they are trustees, to productive use. The typical commercial bank today advertises constantly for business—issues leaflets and other literature—and does everything possible to attract and serve the legitimate borrower.

Figures that back up that statement. During the first half of last year, more than 14,000 loans were made during every banking hour by 41 percent of the nation's commercial banks covered in a survey. The 6,000 banks reporting made close to 6,000,000 new loans totaling more than $10,000,000,000—renewed over 5,500,000 old loans totaling almost $7,700,000,000, and issued over 127,000 mortgage loans totaling $412,000,000. This amounted to the incredible sum of $18,000,000,000—all in a six-months period.

It is obvious that the banks cannot loan to the insolvent business, or to the prospective borrower with a bad credit and character record. But no man who is entitled to a loan, under the terms of state and Federal law, need worry about getting the money he needs for any sound purpose. It's ready and waiting.

The point is that today banks are not only willing to make loans—they are eager to do so. And the record proves it.

"Rebecca"

Against a background of chilling mystery and suspense, "Rebecca" will have its first showing at the Regent Theatre, Springfield, Ohio, on Thursday. "Rebecca" was filmed with Laurence Olivier and Joan Fontaine in the top starring roles, while the featured supporting cast includes Judith Anderson, George Sanders, Claude Rains, G. Aubrey Smith, Reginald Denney and Florence Bates.

There are numerous buildings leased by the government from companies and individuals.

The two smart New Dealers were two clerks in the Refinance Corporation. They pooled a small sum in certain property and sold at a big profit. With this they organized a company and sold stock to get funds to take an option on a whole square. The square is said to have cost $350,000. They applied to the Refinance Corporation for a loan and the New Deal company placed a valuation of $5,000,000 on the square and the loan was granted. The building is being completed at present and has been leased to the government for $50,000 a year for forty years on a tax free basis. Planned prosperity we call it, if you had the chance.

Some time ago you read of the reorganization plan which was passed at the demand of FDR. He promised a reduction in his official family including departments under control of the cabinet. It is interesting to read the monthly official statement of the number of employees on the government payroll. Here are the figures, official, on the February report as issued by the Civil Service Commission. In the city of Washington there are 127,772 employees on the government payroll. This is an increase of 353 according to the commission report over last January. The entire government payroll exclusive of army and navy is $39,015 for last February, a gain of 612 over the month of January. Planned economy.

We had the pleasure of hearing Charles F. Kettering, Dayton and Detroit, several days ago at a luncheon meeting at the Press Club in Washington. He gave many interesting experiences of his work in science and research. He claims you cannot plan anything for certain for two reasons. One is your competitor may force you to change your plans and the next day you yourself may find your plans of the day before are wrong. He illustrated by saying the baseball management always planned to win but the opposition team frequently changed the plan. It was the answer to the so called "Planned Economy."

Riding down Constitution avenue and looking to the left is a new municipal building covering two city squares and will be eight stories high. A few more millions will be spent on this civic center. The six squares of army offices now located on Constitution avenue will be wrecked, these buildings, being erected during the World War. They are concrete but of poor construction as great chunks of cement have fallen from the cornice. Meantime while you look at the buildings being erected and those being wrecked you are riding between some ten squares of other government structures erected within the past twenty years.

The biggest of them all is the agriculture department with affiliate buildings that house some 25,000 officials, clerks, stenographers, etc. Nearly as many people on Uncle Sam's payroll leave that one building each evening as live in Greene county.

One of the greatest New Deal spending projects for private purposes is the new airport being constructed adjacent Washington, D. C., on the south. Part of the tract is swamp and had to be filled fifteen or twenty feet deep. The high ground was lowered and this dirt partially filled the swamp. In fact the 742 acres was either cut down or filled with modern equipment and trucks to do the work. There will be four hangars 236x205 feet. The cement runways will be 875 x200 feet square. There will be 600,000 sq. yds. of paving equal to 51 miles of highway 20 feet wide. Parking space for 5,000 automobiles. In all there will be 18,478,856 cu. yds. of gravel and sand used, or enough for a 20 ft. roadway from New York to San Francisco and back to St. Louis. This is how money is being spent in a small way in the nation's capital to create prosperity at the expense of the taxpayer who gets his tax from the consumer in the price of goods sold.

This is only a fraction of the New Deal building program in that city. Several squares of city property were purchased by the government. All buildings wrecked including a ten-story 600 room apartment house. The wreckers had to use tons of dynamite to break the steel and concrete walls and render the enormous house, which was modern and in a desirable location, a mass of twisted wreckage so that steam shovels could load 200 dump trucks to fill a hole in another part of the city for another government building. On this site will be erected a new army building that will be about six squares long and house some ten thousand officials and clerks.

There are a number of conservative Democrats in both branches of Congress and they are gradually regaining their moral courage to withstand the threats of the administration if they do not follow the New Deal in toto. We sat in the gallery one day last week and heard a half dozen Democrats attack in savage language a bill in the House which if passed would have made every federal judge in the past a puppet and subject to manipulation on easy terms. The present law would be repealed but when the vote was called enough conservative Democrats braved the orders from on high and joined with a solid Republican vote to defeat the measure. Three times last week New Deal measures that were as radical as if they had Russian origin, were defeated by the combined vote of those loyal to their country and not a crowd from "over there". The threat to cut off state relief where congressmen have the nerve to vote their convictions is gradually losing its effect.

Over in the Senate we found Senator McKellar, Dem., Tenn., talking to empty house, only ten members being in their seats. The Wallace Agricultural setup on cotton was nothing for an appropriation of only $4,000,000 to make up for losses due to speculation in the cotton market. McKellar was opposing the bill and exposed some of the AAA methods of squandering public funds. He talked all afternoon and at his suggestion adjournment was taken so he could continue the next day. A number of the AAA official staff was in the gallery and heard McKellar read a long list of persons drawing princely salaries whom he termed incompetent to run any kind of business for themselves or anyone else. The cotton crowd had lost four million in cotton speculation.

To show how the C. I. O. holds a hand with the present administration in Washington, we witnessed a picket line in continuous march in a circle about the door of the National Press Club in that city last Thursday noon. The building is within two squares of the White House. Besides several hundred offices the Press Club, a national organization of newspaper people has its quarters. It made no difference what your mission might be in the building you had to fight your way through the moving picket line due to a strike of employees in a cafeteria located in the basement. Even Charles F. Kettering, Dayton, had the same experience as members of the club and guests.

The strike was brought about by discharge of three employees, all of whom had been convicted in court on charges. One was serving time for attacking a girl employee in a hallway. Two others engaged in a fight while on duty throwing knives and dishes at each other. The union demanded of the management that the three be re-instated as soon as they had served their sentences and this was denied. The picket line was formed and under the Wagner labor law local officials could not interfere and all this within a stone's throw of the head of the government who dares to take issue with the Communist group.

Program For Recovery Outlined By White

DUDLEY A. WHITE

COLUMBUS — (Special)—Congressman Dudley A. White, of Norwalk, candidate for the Republican nomination for United States Senator, is on record in favor of no compromise on the principles of the Republican recovery program. He outlined the program at the Republican state-wide meeting here.

"If this nation will take politics out of relief," he said, "it will preserve the American market for the American farmer; substitute a program of plenty for the doctrine of scarcity; if it will put more business into government and less government into business; return to a sound fiscal policy to restore confidence; curb reckless spending and waste; if it will take the guess and guess out of Social Security laws and administration; if it will restore the government to its proper role of impartial referee in labor disputes; if it will restore to Congress the powers delegated to bureaucracy, and above all, if it will reestablish constitutional government, then we shall see the greatest forward surge of recovery and re-employment ever recorded in history."
